Trudi Horowitz, standing, and Susan Knickle recently showed Andy Berg's paintings at the St. Julien Hotel & Spa, part of a quarterly exhibit they conduct for Art Movement Colorado. Opposite: A view of Griffin Court at The Art Institute of Chicago, a preferred spot for Horowitz to admire art.

Trudi Horowitz and Susan Knickle like to say they share the same eye for art. Three years ago, the two friends combined their talents to form Art Movement Colorado, a Boulder-based firm specializing in providing art and sculpture that is tailored for a specific environment. With a virtual inventory representing contemporary paintings, sculpture and ceramics by more than 40 artists, they've turned pairing the right works and collector into an art in its own right. "Our approach involves a great deal of intuition," expresses Horowitz. "When selecting art for a public space, we absorb the environment and place the first piece in a strategic area. The rest just flows. It's almost subconscious." The two seemed fated to collaborate. Both have served as director of MacLaren Markowitz Gallery; they both collected contemporary art before they met; and each says she just knows the right piece when she sees it. "Facing a huge public space can be daunting," says Knickle, "but jumping right in and starting to enhance it is exhilarating, much like creating a painting itself." ## DOUBLE VISION

TRUDI HOROWITZ & SUSAN KNICKLE

ARTIST TO WATCH:

SK: Andy Berg. His work is sophisticated, colorful and tremendously exciting. We were introduced to him by another one of our equally talented artists, Mark Villarreal.

FAVORITE SHOPS:

TH: Waterworks, Design Within Reach and the consignment shop Clutter in Boulder.

GREATEST INFLUENCES:

SK: Architects and designers are important to us because they create the environments we enhance. Our favorite architect is Roland Hower from Boulder, who happens to be my husband. We love his work because it's sustainable, contemporary and clean.

FAVORITE MUSEUM:

TH: The historical background and the architecture at The Art Institute of Chicago makes viewing art very powerful.

EVERY COLLECTOR SHOULD...

SK: Buy pieces that speak to their heart, trust their intuition, diversify their choices and educate themselves.
